FRANKFORT UNDER QUARANTINE; "FLU" CLAIMING MANY VICTIMS

Frankfort, Feb. 12.—As the result of the serious flu epidemic which is raging in Frankfort, the local board of health authorities have issued instructions that all the local churches and schools remain closed until further notice in order to prevent a further spread of the flu. At present 50 cases are reported in the village. In addition to the ban on the public places mentioned all dances as well as basket ball games have been called off for the time being.

Thus far there has been only one fatality from the disease. Elizabeth Anna, four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Heinsner died on Monday. The funeral was held Thursday from the late home, the Rev. G. Lambrecht officiating. As no church funerals can be held the services were only held at the home concluding at the Pleasant Hill Cemetery where interment took place.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM FRED S. HAVEN

The editor of the News-Bulletin is in receipt of the following interesting letter from Fred S. Haven a former New Lenox man who is spending the winter with his family at St. Petersburg, Florida:

"I wish to congratulate you both upon the literary style and typographical appearance of your paper. As a former newspaper man I appreciate some of the difficulties of your work."

"I have been in Florida since Dec. 18. The winters here are very mild. I have not seen any snow or frost since I arrived in Florida and some days the temperature reaches 80 degrees. I don't think that it has been lower than 45 degrees since Jan. 15. The influenza has not reached here yet, but I understand that it is raging in Cuba, which is 300 or 400 miles south of here. The climate is about all this part of the country has to offer, as the soil is very poor being mostly sand. I am told that it is necessary to spend $50 to $100 per acre every year for fertilizers to raise even grape fruit or oranges. The tourist crop is the best paying crop here and the natives know how to squeeze the money out of the visitors."

"In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Schmuhl and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baumgartner, Mr. Cooper who owns the Allerton farm north of Mokena, is also here. Mr. Cooper has recently purchased a valuable lot in St. Petersburg and expects to build a house upon it as he plans to spend his winters here regularly."

DEALING WITH THE UN-DEPORTED

America consists of Americans and of nothing but Americans. Those who within the past few years, have come to think of America as a vast mixture of languages, races and clashing doctrines, have had the wrong viewpoint. They have been thinking of America as a place and not as an ideal.

Millions of immigrants have crossed the ocean from the Old World. They have reached our shores, but many of them have never reached America. On the other hand, many of our native born are not now and never have been Americans. There is no such thing as an "American Red." There is no such thing as an American I. W. W."

An American is a man who feels American, thinks American and acts American—no matter where he was born.

America has plenty of room and a warm welcome for those who wish to become Americans, but it cannot spare a single square foot of soil to those who intend to continue un-American and anti-American. Fortunately, we can deport some of the most noxious of these intruders, but these are but a small percentage of the unit. What about the remainder?

There is but one answer: They must be Americanized.

This, however, is not a task for the Department of Justice, not even for Congress and the various state legislatures; it is a task for the rank and file of American citizens. It is a task of education plus, and of influence plus; it is really a task of moral coercion. It is a task for swift and energetic action, wherein American citizens in all their vast numbers must seize opportunities when they exist, and create opportunities when they do not exist to Americanize all who come within their own circles or else to cast them out of their circles.

It is no time to talk of "broad-minded sympathy" or of "conciliation", where a great question of right and wrong is involved. You cannot "conciliate" evil any more than you can "conciliate" a conflagration.

"ONCE I LOVED HIM."

"And . . . and I want to thank you now," she said in a tone which would have fallen as a blessing upon the ears of any other man alive, "for speaking as though you loved him. And for all you did for him. Perhaps you know already . . . perhaps you can't know . . . but I'm trying to tell you, because he was . . . he was one of my very dearest friends."

His brain snapped; he bent down to her.

"You loved him—too?" he said, uncontrollably.

"Yes," she said. "Once—I loved him, too!"

Alone in the appointed guest room of the Cullen home—for Mr. Cullen had been as good as his word, and sent a car to fetch his visitor's belongings—Hilliard lighted a cigarette (an acquired taste, but advisable as a minor deception, since he had been notorious for his taste in cigars) and grinned expansively. Leisuredly he began to undress, but before his shoes were quite unlaced, he sat back comfortably in his chair and meditated.

"All serene so far," he said. "But when Carol came in . . ." He shook his head vigorously. "Well, it's over . . . anyway. The doctor . . ." Hilliard's face darkened. "There's the man I want to get at! Pious old hypocrite! And he didn't think I deserved to be in the family! Sort of hate to let him make money out of this deal, but it's all in the game. Coals of fire! But ten thousand's a lot from the doctor . . . well, I'll say ten thousand."

He closed his eyes dreamily; and his thoughts reverted from Doctor Durant to the doctor's daughter.

"Carol—Carol!" he murmured. "One minute there, I thought I'd crack. And I was 'one of her dearest friends.' I was, was I? And she loved me—once. Once! Pity it wasn't twice! Pity she and the doctor didn't say so the night they kicked me out so neatly. Well, . . . business is business . . . After they've made their money out of it, and found out this man Hilliard's some little gold-plated whirlwind all by himself . . . Gad! can't I see their faces when they get the truth of it!"

With the cigarette drooping from his lips, he stood up and swept a clear space in the table. From his suitcase he exhumed a tablet of thin transparent writing paper of a kind not sold in America; it was the paper on which the letter to Cullen from Richard Morgan had been written, and it was sheer luck that Hilliard had brought the remainder of the tablet from New York with him. He tossed a blob of ink from his fountain pen and inspected it critically.

"Too black," he decided, and went to the bathroom, where he half-emptied the reservoir of the pen and refilled it with water.

"That ought to be just about right . . . sort of pale and mysterious and war-strength."

He seated himself at the table, took the pen in his left hand and inscribed circles on the paper; scribbled a meaningless sentence and laughed gently.

"Funny how some people can be ambidextrous and take so long to realize it. If I hadn't caught a bullet in my arm, and tried to write left-handed in the hospital, I'd give myself away up here in no time. Writing's too blasted distinctive. But, as it is, Left Hand, very large and plain, is Henry Hilliard—Here he shifted the pen to the other hand—"And Right—and, small and curlicue, is poor, dead Dicky Morgan—"one of her dearest friends." I'm glad I killed that chap off—he never amounted to a hill of beans anyway. But this Hilliard person—a live wire, boy, a live wire!"

And with a grin of sardonic humor, he wrote on the flimsy paper, slowly and a little irregularly, as though in physical discomfort:

"Neuilly, 7-19-15.

"No matter what you ever think, no matter what you have ever thought, I have loved you."

He grimaced, pondered diligently, and made a correction.

"I have always loved you more than my own life. You said my ideals had fallen—do you think so now? I don't, dearest; I think they're almost what you would have them. And it may be that simply because of that, I've loved you more every day, and—"

Hilliard sat back, and his eyes were softly luminous.

"Suppose, by the luck of the very devil, I should fall in love with her again?" he said aloud. "Suppose I should!" He tossed away his cigarette and rested his head in his hands. "Oh, Carol! I did care . . ." His shoulders shook spasmodically; then all at once he flung himself out of the chair and took to tramping the floor in a hurricane of emotion. His face was set in granite; he caught sight of it in a mirror, halted and himself was stunned by the transcendent mask which covered his soul in revolt. The work of the surgeons was not far short of miraculous; he couldn't upset it, not by any effort of his will. The eyes might flash, or lower, or chill—the other features were still calm and strong in their splendid glory. Even now, the face which he saw reflected in the mirror was one to convert the most hurried of all passing strangers to a new, if unformed, assurance in the brotherhood of man.

"You dirty blackguard!" said Hilliard, showing his teeth. He went pensively back to the letter, studied it, gazed at the floor.

"But after all," he said, "no matter what she or anybody else did to me . . . and if I can kill two birds with one stone, and be what I've wanted to be—all except this damn way of going about it . . . She acted as though this infernal lying letter would please her—that's not the point; it's a quicker way to get at the doctor . . . Well, it gets her a letter I never intended to write . . . and Dutoit's war cross, too . . . that'll make it all the easier . . . I'll give her that. Angela was going to have it, still."

So I was 'one of her dearest friends,' was I? What's that worth to Henry Hilliard, bringing back the news from the front? He sniffed scornfully. "Ten thousand dollars—I hope. And the doctor'll make twenty out of it . . . Gad! that's turning the other cheek with a vengeance! Hanged if I don't almost wish he'd lose his rotten money! But that can't be helped—I'll get some satisfaction somehow."

He reread the unfinished note, folded it, creased it heavily for versatility, and gave it the final examination.

"Business . . . is business," he said, musing. "That was a pretty sporty thing for me to do . . . to tell her there was a letter. Bit of a chance, too. And after smashing our engagement, she could stand there and tell me . . . oh, rubbish! So suppose we say . . . fifteen thousand from the doctor! But confound it—the better salesman I am, the more I get out of him, the more he makes! Whew! Where's the satisfaction in that? . . ."

His pupils had narrowed again, giving the lie to the sweetness of his smiling mouth. Then the smile faded and Hilliard was staring fixedly at the document in his hands.

"I wonder who in thunder that man Armstrong is?" said the masquerader who had prided himself that he no longer cared.

CHAPTER V.

He wakened early; and in that state of half-conscious reverie which has less of worldliness in it than perhaps any other state of human existence, he lay vegetating, subtly aware that he was very peaceful and content; but presently, when his brain had yawned and stretched itself, and begun to set about its usual functions (or, in other words, when Hilliard was sufficiently aroused to resume his usual introspectiveness) he was extremely unhappy, and not in the least vainglorious.

He scowled, and struggled to remember what it was that had risen out of thin air and angered him last night, at the very instant of his dropping off to sleep. Not the Cullens, nor Carol himself, nor Armstrong . . . but wait a moment! Who was Armstrong? Whence and whither, Armstrong? A newcomer to Syracuse (that is, within two years) and already proprietary—Hilliard frowned, and rubbed his eyes, and wondered anew. He was a trifle amused and a trifle ashamed of himself; was it credible that he could be jealous of a man who had merely appropriated what Hilliard had no further interest in? How inconsistent . . . and yet how superbly characteristic of human nature! Hilliard chuckled to himself in recognition of it and dismissed the proposition as unworthy of further attention. Dismissed it, yes . . . as a child dismisses a rubber ball with an elastic cord attached to it.

From below stairs a Japanese gong chimed softly and Hilliard, without delaying another instant, leaped to the floor. Half an hour later, bathed, shaved and dressed, he descended complacently; the second day of his remarkable performance was begun.

The Cullens, father and daughter, were waiting for him. They greeted him cheerfully; and he was glad that grief hadn't clung to their eyelids; he would have felt depressed, even although he would have sensed the hidden compliment. Quick to grasp the nearest handle of diplomacy, he saw that cheerfulness on his own part would help the situation, for now that his duty as a courier was over, there was no need for long protracted melancholy.

It was a cheerful trio, then, that sat down to breakfast; there was no exaltation about it, but at least there was no somber cloud of mourning. Angela, behind the coffee urn, had occasional moments of pensiveness, but that was to be expected, and condoned; indeed, Hilliard held himself to be greatly favored by even this.

She was imaginative, and Hilliard's pose was calculated to appeal to a lively imagination. He treated her not as a young girl, but with the respectful deference which belongs to a mature woman, a mistress of a household, and a hostess in her own right. She was charmed and captivated, and so was her father—most assuredly he was! So charmed, in fact, that instead of leaving for his office at half-past eight, he lingered until half-past nine; so captivated, that as his limousine slid quietly down the long, steep hill of James street, he found himself ascribing a new degree of credit to Dicky Morgan for the simple reason that Dicky Morgan had gained the full esteem of such a friend as Hilliard.

A mighty nice young man, thought Cullen. A man of soundest judgment, through and through. A man of brilliant intellect and razor-edged analysis. Had he not said, and furnished illustrations from his broad experience, exactly what Cullen himself had said, in regard to labor, and materials, and transportation, and production, these half a dozen years? Cullen sat back and smiled triumphantly. It does a man good to hear his pet convictions approved, expanded and laid down as axioms by another wise man.

Back on the wide veranda Angela had curled up comfortably in the hammock and, beside her, Hilliard was enjoying a cigarette. He was enjoying, too, this rare interlude of respite; he looked across at Angela, and thanked his stars for the invitation which had made this quiet hour possible.

She lifted her eyes, caught Hilliard smiling at her and blushed furiously, not for any shame accruing to her, but because she had arrived at the age of easy blushes.

"I . . . suppose you're going over to Carol's pretty soon," she said, constrained to say something and grasping at the first available idea.

"So anxious to get rid of me?" he asked, amused.

"Oh, no!" Horror was in her tone and mortification. "Only . . . I wanted to talk to you before you saw Carol. Because Carol doesn't . . . I don't think she'll exactly feel as I do about this . . . I know she won't. Maybe it's because Dick and I were chums, and she and Dick were . . . oh, you know. It's different. You ought to take that into consideration—when you talk to her, I mean. I don't mean I don't care, because I do—terribly—but I . . . I can see what it meant to Dick . . . and I know how he'd have loved it, and picked this out of every possible way, to . . . end things, but Carol . . . she's different."

"How?" Hilliard's voice was even, but very low.

"Older," she said, looking away.

"And . . . and they were going to marry each other some time."

"But wasn't that broken off?"

"Yes, but she was waiting."

"Waiting?"

"Why, of course."

Hilliard's breath quickened.

"I should have guessed that this Mr. Armstrong—"

"Oh, but that wasn't until she thought Dick wasn't ever coming back. And besides, she isn't really crazy about him—just lonesome."

"Indeed," Hilliard compelled himself to relax. "So you think she'll be . . . hurt?"

"Hurt?" Angela's voice was thin with emphasis. "Rather!"

"If there's anything you think I'd better say, or not say—" He rose, out of sheer inability to endure this ingenious estimate of Carol's heartache. "Perhaps you'll tell me—because it's time for me to be going over."

Angela had risen, too, and stood beside him. Her features were composed, but still suggestive of inward emotions a little too tender to convey.

"If there's anybody in the world," she said, "who could give Carol any consolation just now, it's you. I don't suppose you ever were a minister, but you look as though everybody could come to you and tell 'most everything, and you'd help . . . anyway, you'd try to. So I wish you'd . . . you'd sit and listen . . . Carol's got to talk to somebody, and when you're hurt the way she is, you can't talk to your family . . . and you were a friend of Dick's. And . . ." She swallowed, and went on more slowly. "You can use your own judgment, of course, but if I were in your place—I'd lie."

"Lie?" he repeated, aghast.

"Yes, I would! He . . . he must have sent her some word, Mr. Hilliard! He must have!" She was desperately serious now, and thoroughly aroused. "It means the whole world to her! It's everything! Why, even I've got more than she has, and she was waiting for him to come back to her! I'd lie myself black in the face, but I'd tell her something—tell her anything I could think of to make her believe he hadn't stopped caring! It can't do any harm now. It can't hurt you. And I won't even ask you whether you do or not. Only you're here, and she'll trust you—"

"Will she?"

"How could she help it? And . . . and that's all. Please don't let her very asked it. And because it's the dearest, most generous, most thoughtful thing I ever heard of in all my life . . . And after that, can't we be truly friends?"

Flushed, perplexed, honored, she gave him her hand with a hesitancy which betrayed the deep sense of compliment she felt.

"I don't think I could be prouder of anything that could possibly happen to me," she said.

Was it worth the blatant nummery he had conceived and executed? Was it not worth that, and infinitely more? She was proud of his friendship . . . and she shared that distinction with no one else in the entire universe.

Proud of it! Hilliard was fulsomely abashed. Abashed—yes, and simultaneously glorified. He had come to make the city proud, ignorantly proud, of the man whose deeds had merited no renown. Here, at the very inception of his plans, a seventeen-year-old girl was proud of him as he was. Courage. Inspiration. Resolve.

He had won her respect by the promise of a lie; and in this instant he vowed to deserve, by other and increasing lies if need be, the prestige he was unalterably committed to gain, whereby the past should be as nothing, and the future should be a magnificent citadel of reconquered dreams.

She was proud of him, and she had approved the lie in behalf of Dicky Morgan's memory. Unwittingly, she had sanctioned the very purpose of his coming, and the method of his approach. She had confirmed his own intentions, and given him the will to advance. He was to act as the staunch defender of her playmate perished, and to make of himself a new and a better man, worthy of the eulogies which, as trustee, he now accepted for the unworthy Morgan. He consecrated himself to this end. Told himself fiercely that he would succeed. And she was proud of him! It was another omen.

It was eleven o'clock to the minute when Hilliard, not quite so blithe as a wedding guest, and yet not altogether as doleful as a mourner, waved his hand to a slender girl who stood on the veranda of a house diagonally across the street, and went slowly up the Durants' brick walk. He had anticipated the effect of this pilgrimage upon his nerves, he had discounted it; and Angela's advice had given him an artificial stimulus for the moment; nevertheless, as the front door opened to him, and he saw, over the head of a smiling maid-servant, a hallway and a vestibule unchanged, his breath came a little faster than usual, and his cheeks went a little darker. It was, so to speak, a return to a shrine, and a normal man might easily be pardoned for a little sentiment on the side, no matter how often he had changed his religion during the meantime.

The maid, having deposited him in the living room, disappeared in a quick flurry of skirts; Hilliard, standing at the end of the long, high-roofed apartment, found himself surrounded by a thousand goods to remembrance. Not an item was out of place; not an item was otherwise than as he had often recalled it; his memory had been photographic.

At the opposite end of the room, flanking the black-marbled fireplace, was a graceful, swan-necked sofa, beautifully carved and splendidly upholstered. Doctor Durant had once remarked that Carol represented the fifth successive generation of her family to be courted on it. And evening after evening, in the ages that had gone before, Hilliard had sat there and dreamed and loved; and sometimes when Carol had slipped away from him he had sat there and dreamed and lived and smoked, while she played hopkin and Rubinstein and Moscovski to him. And the piano—somewhat battle-scarred but with a master instrument—was still over in its accustomed place, with the "Military Polonaise" perched open on the rack.

Then his pupils narrowed to gray necks of ice; for memory, by one of those tricks against which there is no defense, told him that he stood in this same position, in exactly this same spot, when two years ago the doctor had pronounced his sentence, and Carol, in terrible silence, had then and there confirmed it. His imagination conjured up that scene again; his blood chilled; he could fancy that Carol and the doctor were actually before him, and that he was staring at them in the flesh, and feeling the lash of the doctor's quiet peroration. . . .

At the threshold there was a faint rustle of fabric, and Hilliard turned. Carol! His hands went out mechanically, and hers to him; and Hilliard, tasting the acid of his somber mood, smiled benignly.

"I mustn't keep you waiting," he said, dropping her hands. "I've brought you the letter I spoke about." He gave it to her, and coughed his embarrassment. "I'm positive it's for you. And I'm sure you don't want anything to prevent you from reading it at once, so if you'd rather prefer to have me come back later for the talk you wanted—"

He was already moving toward the doorway; she restrained him gently, although her eyes couldn't be dragged from the folded paper he had given her.

"No," she said, "please don't go. I particularly want you to meet my father, Mr. Hilliard. He's anxious to see you, too. Won't you wait while I call him?"

He inclined his head; followed her with his eyes to the hallway, strained his hearing, and knew that she had opened the letter as soon as she was out of his sight. His lips twitched cynically—and then, as he remembered Angela's injunction, straightened. After all, this much was pure charity. Down the hallway, there was the reverberation of a closing door, and silence.

Justice to Dick Morgan's memory.

For Musical Beginners.

Builders of modern flats might well take a hint from a unique feature in Buckland's hotel in Brook street, now undergoing transformation to accommodate the new Guards club. This was a suite of "sound-proof" rooms called the "Handel suite," after the composer, who lived and died in Brook street, for the use of musically inclined visitors. This admirable arrangement enabled amateurs of such distressing instruments in the hands of the novice as the piccolo or the bagpipes to practice without disturbing their fellow-guests.—London Times.

Simply Worn Out

How Many Women Are Like This?

Can anything be more wearing for women than the ceaseless round of household duties? Oh! the monotony of it all—work and drudge; no time to be sick; tired, ailing, yet cannot stop. There comes a time when something "snaps" and they find themselves "simply worn out," and to make matters worse, have contracted serious feminine disorder which almost always follows the constant overtaxing of a woman's strength. Then they should remember that there is no remedy like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—the experience of these two women establishes that fact:

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—"After the birth of my last child I had such painful spells that would unfit me entirely for my housework. I suffered for months and the doctor said that my trouble was organic ulcers and I would have to have an operation. That was an awful thing to me, with a young baby and four other children, so one day I thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it had helped me years before and I decided to try it again. I took five bottles of Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and since then I have been a well woman, able to take care of my house and family without any trouble or a day's pain. I am ready and thankful to swear by my medicine any time. I am forty-four years old and have had a day's illness of any kind for three years."—Mrs. H. Koenig, 617 Ellis Blvd., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Sandusky, Ohio.—"After the birth of my baby I had organic trouble. My doctor said it was caused by too heavy lifting and I would have to have an operation. I would not consent to an operation and let it go for over a year, having my sister do my work for me as I was not able to walk. One day my aunt came to see me and told me about your medicine—said it cured her of the same thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and they have cured me. Now I do my own housework, washing and ironing and sewing for my family and also do sewing for other people. I still take a bottle of Vegetable Compound every spring for a tonic. I recommend your medicine to others who have troubles similar to mine and you can use my letter if you wish."—Mrs. PAUL PAPENRUS, 1325 Stone St., Sandusky, Ohio.

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

CLEAR SNOW FROM HIGHWAYS

Motortrucks Given Passageway for Carrying Coal and Various Other Supplies.

In an effort to keep all lines of supply open for uninterrupted traffic during the winter months, and to thus aid in minimizing the discomforts of the public, an appeal is going out to highways authorities throughout the country where snowfall is heavy, to keep the roads clear of snow.

Emphasis is placed upon the fact that the transportation of coal and other fuel is more important in winter than in summer, and that it is equally as important to keep rural mail routes and main market roads free from snow as it is to keep railroad tracks clear.

Officials connected with highway work anticipate a prompt response to this appeal. They report a decided increase in the interest of the public on this matter of prompt removal of snow from highways, not only to meet the necessity of keeping all sources of supply and communication in effective operation, but as a means of protecting the public's investment in roads.

If there were little or no demand for traffic during snow weather, highway authorities state the cost of snow removal would be justified. Snow melting on the roadbeds tends to soften the subgrade and loosens the base under the wearing surface. Evidences of these damages may be seen after heavy snows in the late winter and early spring.

When snow is not removed on trunk highways, traffic gradually breaks its way through when thaw begins. The traffic will create one or two sets of ruts or tracks. The constant tracking in the same rut produces disastrous results to the road surface, making repairs difficult and expensive.

ACTIVITY IN HIGHWAY WORK

Up to July 1, 1919, State Bonds Aggregating $224,800,000, Had Been Authorized.

Aside from money to be used co-operatively under the federal aid road act, aggregating nearly $680,000,000, some states will expend large sums, and their several subdivisions will provide large additional amounts.

"It is interesting to note that up to July 1, 1919," says the secretary of agriculture in his annual report, "state bond issues aggregating $224,800,000 had been authorized and approved by popular vote and that provision has been made for voting next year on proposals for the issuance of additional state road bonds to the extent of approximately $314,000,000. During the present and the next fiscal year there will be made available for road improvement at least $1,000,000,000. Certainly few laws, if any, have produced greater results, either in terms of expenditures for a good purpose or in terms of helpful legislation and machinery, than the federal aid road act. It seems clear, in the circumstances, that the principal limiting factors in the 1920 program will be those of rail transportation for, and production of, suitable road materials, the contractors' organizations available, and the labor supply."

NEW FRONTIERS VERY REAL

Nothing of an "Imaginary Line" About the Borders of the New European States.

Frontiers used to be "imaginary lines" or marks on a map. The miles and miles of new frontiers in Europe are not "imaginary" and not confined to maps. You can walk right up and touch them.

Out there in central and eastern Europe, frontiers are fine-tooth combs, that delay trains for hours at every crossing point. Some of the new frontiers are "flying walls" of soldiers with fixed bayonets. Others are guarded fences.

Travelers without exceptional credentials go through searching examinations, often bodily "friskings."

Soldiers armed to the teeth guard the trains and passengers during examinations and customs inspections, to see that nobody gets out or in without the official papers.

Roads at frontier points are also guarded by soldiers who preside over striped gates that go up and down like the crossing gates of American railways.

Passports and visas in the new countries are made as difficult as possible. Business men are held up weeks, as a rule. The official idea seems to be to keep everybody that's in the country in, and to bar everybody else out.

Not Tied.

A small boy of Columbus was out riding with his mother one day recently, when he saw several pumpkins in a field. He wished to stop the machine and get one, but the mother explained that this would not do, that the pumpkins on the vine were the property of the man who owned the field, and that in due time he would gather them for winter use. The boy was convinced, and said no more until he happened to see a pumpkin unattached to a vine, lying at the side of the road. "Well, mother," he said, "I guess we can have that one. It isn't tied."—Indianapolis News.

Slightly Embarrassed.

A good story was told to me the other day by Miss Marie Lohr concerning a maid who, quite unexpectedly, expressed a wish to "give notice." Somewhat surprised, Miss Lohr asked, "Is there any reason?" Then, seeing that the girl hesitated and looked confused, she added, "Something private, perhaps?" "No, ma'am," was the answer, "it ain't no private. It's a sergeant. He's been denobilled."—New York Times.

MILLIONS

Acid-Stomach

Millions of people suffer year after year from ailments affecting practically every part of the body, never dreaming that their ill health can be traced directly to acid stomach. Here is the reason: poor digestion means poor nourishment of the different organs and tissues of the body. The blood is impoverished—becomes weak, thin, sluggish. Ailments of many kinds spring from such conditions. Biliousness, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, general weakness, loss of power and energy, headache, insomnia, nervousness, mental depression—even more serious ailments such as catarrh and cancer of the stomach, intestinal ulcers, cirrhosis of the liver, heart trouble—all of these can often be traced directly to acid-stomach.

Keep a sharp lookout for the first symptoms of acid-stomach—indigestion, heartburn, belching, food repeating, that awful painful bloating after eating, and sour, gassy stomach. EATONIC, the wonderful modern remedy for acid-stomach, is guaranteed to bring quick relief from these stomach miseries. Thousands say they feel so much better in every way. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise. Make your life worth living—no aches or pains—no blues or melancholy—no more of that tired, listless feeling. Be well and strong. Get back your physical and mental punch; your vim, vigor and vitality. You will always be weak and ailing as long as you have acid-stomach. So get rid of it now. Take EATONIC Tablets—they taste good—you eat them like a bit of candy. Your druggist has EATONIC—50 cents for a big box. The home of Wm. Semmler, editor of the News-Bulletin, has been placed under quarantine, owing to the fact that Mrs. Semmler, wife of the editor is confined with scarlet fever. The editor, however, can be found at any time at his office as the quarantine does not affect him or his paper.

Now that spring is preparing to listen to the "alarm clock" of nature, he is apt to turn over suddenly most any morning and say "howdy" to see if you are as yet awake. Kind of keep your weather eye on this old codger, and if he tries to fool you, give him the "once over" and take him round and show him what you have been doing while he has been asleep.

The life of a country editor is indeed a "happy" life. There is nothing whatever to make it otherwise. The editor of the metropolitan paper may regret the limited size of old mother earth in his desire to supply news for his columns, but the editor of the country journal has no such nightmare. Every farm is a kingdom and every farmer a king and every humble home a mansion that furnishes news like Niagara furnishes power. The News-Bulletin only wishes that its columns were longer and its pages larger and greater in number. At that, we're happy. Come on in, the water's fine. The key to all this happiness is--W-O-R-K.

Revenue is to the corporation what blood is to the body, reduce or thin it and the corporate body at once shows financial anemia, physical impairment, operative inefficiency.

A corporation engaged in the Telephone business, upon which the public is so vitally dependent, must have ample revenues in order that the equipment shall be of the latest and best type; that the lines shall be kept in perfect condition; that the personnel shall be contented and alert on account of liberal compensation and attractive working surroundings, and that bond interest and a reasonably good dividend rate shall be secure, in order that new capital for extensions and improvements may be readily obtainable.

The source of these revenues is the charge to the public for the service rendered.

Under present conditions higher rates and good service are interdependent. The Telephone Company is the Trustee of the public for the receipt and expenditure of funds devoted to the service of the public.

Where Nature Furnishes the Heat.

A few miles out of Naples is a place known to all tourists, the "Solfatara." It is doubtless the crater of a nearly extinct volcano. Steam carrying a strong odor of brimstone rises from various crevices in the ground, and the guide, for a suitable fee, will permit you to cook an egg in the hot sand.

Wonderful Yellowstone Park.

The Yellowstone National park, the crowning wonder of America's wonderlands, has within its area 3,312 square miles, several high mountain ranges, three large rivers with their tributaries, 26 lakes and 25 waterfalls.

Robert's Tribute.

Robert has an earnest young mother who tries to impress upon him the importance of being thoughtful and considerate. For his birthday she made him a snug cap and sweater, and he thanked her warmly, saying: "I do love you mother—you are so very thinky."

Where the Feathers Go.

"A man might succeed in feathering his own nest," remarked the Observer of Events and Things, "if so much of his money didn't go toward putting them on his wife's hats."

Attire for the Party and Ball

This season the debutante and the subdebutante are coming into their own. After two years of utter neglect the debt piled up is to be paid, and paid in full with all past interest due, observes a leading fashion correspondent.

Parties, dinners and dances galore are on the program, one crowding the other so closely that two years' reserve strength would seem a necessity. It seems, too, as if everything had been designed in frocks with an eye to the requirements of the debutante—short skirts, short sleeves, oceans of ruffles and foolish little trimmings—and the matron will have to find something suitable as best she may.

Now, it is a well known fact that seldom does the very young woman favor the type of dress that her elders would choose for her. The adorable youthful models hold no particular charm for the adorable youthful girl, but all this has been cleverly attended to by some one who understands these matters well. The vamp and the baby vamp are out of the running to a great extent, but it is a bit too soon to expect a direct change, so in spite of soft colors and multitudes of ruffles there is frequently a touch of sophistication.

If the very young woman is a bit determined she will finally win, for back in the corners here and there are some deliciously subtle frocks, even to those of black chantilly lace, which no one could possibly call suitable for the debutante unless one should see the modifications as shown in the models.

Colors Fresher and Clearer.

As to colors, the matron again is in for a very hard time if she is to continue in the height of fashion. Be it admitted that the colors are fresher and clearer than ever, they are a trifle difficult for any but the very youthful to wear.

One is struck immediately with the difference in the shades shown for the debutante and those in the regular department. Most of the colors are intensified, and the pastel shades the matron is supposed to wear are slightly more than that when shown for the younger woman. Jade color is one of the season's most approved shades and orchid, with a splash of mauve, is also liked.

Taffeta is quite evidently the material best adapted to the present models in all the afternoon frocks; whether in light colors or dark blues and browns for the street, it asserts itself in the bulging skirts. For afternoon one finds further crispness added by combining organdie with the taffeta. Nets of the finest possible mesh are amazingly embroidered in eyelet. The last thing one would expect to see used on net and a thing that would be impossible if the net were not almost as fine as voile.

A combination of three materials proves a success in a linen dress, with bindings of red and white, checked gingham and finishing touches of organdie.

This spring dress is just the thing for a debutante. It is girlish and dainty. Frocks are made of ecru organdie, with two wide insertions of same color.

The important thing, however, about these dresses is the manner in which they carry the impression of increased width and not an impression really so much as an actual increase in the quantity of material used in the skirts. The means whereby the width is attained are many and varied, but like the dresses for southern wear, the apron is the most prominent feature. It may be so diminutive that it is hardly larger than a bib and it may be large enough to form the skirt front or back, but it is sure to be an apron.

Pink Taffeta Afternoon Frocks.

A rose pink afternoon frock is typical of many others and in a very charming way. The silk is the color of a frosty raspberry ice, with a girdle of ribbon of lavender which tones in so well that one is hardly aware there is any difference of color except that the effect is delicious. The bouffant skirt stands out at the sides as a result of the cordings set in a deep band about the hips. This in the overskirt, for there is a slightly narrower underskirt beneath.

The short sleeves are finished with a bit of the embroidered organdie and

An advance model of exquisite daintiness is this frock for Miss Springtime. It is of net and filet; tucks and dainty embroidery are sure to appeal.

Afternoon Gown for Young Girl.

An afternoon gown that the very young girl will just dote on is of black chantilly lace, trimmed with soft French blue ribbons that should bring it within "mamma's approval," for they give the dress exactly the air of youth in spite of the matron's black lace of which it is made. At the hips the lace is wired so that it stands out properly, and over this in the front an apron of the lace falls so that it partially obscures the ribbon, which follows the curved line of the apron with a bow here and there.

The sleeves are short, with a deep ruffle of the chantilly, and the bodice is nothing much but a wide ruffle of it about the neck and down the sides of the front.

Ribbon, as every one knows, is a very important item in the list of trimmings this season, and if not watched carefully will be apt to get a bit tiresome. One new way to use this form of embellishment is seen on a dress of orange-colored chiffon—rather a pale shade of orange or orange color goes, but by no means faded looking. The ribbon was applied like the crimped edge of an expert caterer's pie. It was simply crimped or fluted and laid about the neck and sleeves of the gown and also in strips down the sides of the skirt. The ribbon is in the same shade as the chiffon.

The White Crepe Frock.

A white crepe silk frock is trimmed with grosgrain also in white in another and attractive manner. Beginning with the skirt, which is in every model the most important point at the present time, we find interesting extensions on the skirt at the sides, which are further supported in the effort to increase the width by the apron of the material covering the entire front of the frock and furnished with loops of the ribbon extended at the sides.

The extensions of the material are merely strips doubled and inset into the sides of the skirt so that they extend like fins on the sides. The smartest of the frocks have no collars, or, at least, the frocks intended for smart occasions have no collars, and this dress following this lead has only a tiny row of the loops about the neck.

Figured materials are among the most difficult to treat, but some particularly smart little frocks, with real dash, are seen in reds and blues in very conventional patterns. That the patterned material is not combined with plain probably adds to the smartness. Even the ruffles about the neck and sleeves, fine plaitings of the material, give the frock distinction.

The material of these particular frocks is indestructible voile and the pattern in a white dot, not too large, and set so closely on the ground of red or blue that there is more white than color. The skirt is caught up under, harem fashion, and trimmed with perpendicular ruffles of the same fine plaiting as that used on the bodice.

It is better only sometimes to be right than at all times to be wrong. Before I resolve to do one thing or the other I must gain confidence in my own ability to keep my resolves when they are made.—Lincoln.

SEASONABLE FOODS.

The following is something a little out of the ordinary, but a dish which uses left-over bits of chicken and furnishes a tasty dish:

Chicken Pancakes.—Remove all bits of white meat left on the framework of roast chicken. Take the bones, skin and giblets of the fowl and as much chicken broth as will cover the whole. Water may be used if there is no broth. Add an onion, cut fine, a piece of carrot and simmer an hour or two. Strain, remove the fat and thicken with flour and butter cooked together. Remove from the fire and stir in the yolks of two eggs beat up with the juice of half a lemon. Pour this sauce over the prepared chicken and let it get cold. Make two very thin pancakes, cut out of them eight pieces five inches long and four inches wide and put them aside. Spread the pieces of pancake on a big dish and cover each with thin-sliced cooked bacon. On the bacon set a large tablespoonful of the minced chicken, fold the pancake over, seal with a little beaten egg white, crumb them and bake a pale brown in a well-buttered dish. Serve hot on a napkin.

Philadelphia Butter Buns.—Make a sponge of one cake of compressed yeast, one-fourth of a cupful of water, one cupful of scalded milk and one and one-half cupfuls of bread flour. When light add one-fourth cupful of butter, melted, two egg yolks, one-half teaspoonful of salt, the grated rind of a lemon and about two cupfuls of flour. Knead until smooth and elastic. Cover close and set aside to double in bulk. Turn upside down on a board, roll into a rectangular sheet, spread with softened butter, dredge with sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle with currants and roll as a jelly roll. Cut into inch pieces an inch and a quarter long. This amount will make 16 buns. Butter the pan in which they are to be baked, dredge well with brown sugar and place the buns. When light, bake carefully not to burn on the bottom. The sugar and butter should glaze the bottom of the buns. Three or four tablespoonfuls of butter and half a cupful of brown sugar will be needed for the bottom of the pan.

Creole Pralines.—Stir three cupfuls of granulated sugar and one cupful of thin cream or milk and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Boil without stirring to the soft ball stage. Cook over the fire in a smooth saucepan one cupful of sugar until it is caramelized. Pour the first mixture into the caramel and let it boil up once. Take from the fire and beat until thick, adding at the last moment three or four cupfuls of pecan meats. Drop by spoonfuls on buttered marble to cool.

A little word of kindness spoken, A motion or a tear Has often healed the heart that's broken. And made a friend sincere.—John Greenleaf Whittier.

'LITTLE ECONOMIES.'

Every one who wants to help the state this year can do so by giving thought to the question of how to economize food. If we are careful of the little wastes, the larger ones will look after themselves. One of the best tests of patriotism just now is the stopping of all waste of food in our homes and substituting other foods for those which are less plentiful. This can be done without sacrificing health or strength.

If a veal loaf or any kind of meat loaf is wrapped in oiled paper before baking it will save a loss of flavor and juices with no hard crust.

An emergency filling for sandwiches for two or three people can be made from half a jelly glass of chopped meat.

A tablespoonful of molasses added to griddle-cake batter will make them brown nicely.

Keep a small bottle of caramelized sugar to color gravies. Brown sugar in a clean, smooth frying pan until a dark brown, add boiling water to dissolve the sugar and bottle the liquid. A few drops will color a bowl of gravy.

To remove the small feathers from game dip the bird after picking it as well as possible in melted paraffin; the wax when cool will come off with the small pinfeathers. The paraffin may be melted and strained and used again and again.

Honey may be used in many dishes in place of sugar; is fine in cake and cookies, makes good griddle cake syrup and candy; in fact is an all-round good substitute for sugar.

There are not many happinesses so complete as those that are snatched under the shadow of the sword.—Kipling.

THE FUNCTIONS OF FOODS.

No housemother who reads the current news and magazines can be ignorant in regard to the importance of food study. There are a few general principles which if borne in mind when supplying the food for the family, will feed them correctly. First in importance is the point that all families differ as to needs.

The man who works at hard labor out of doors can eat, digest and assimilate foods that would injure one who is an inactive indoor worker. A growing child who is very active will consume and care for as much food as the average man, because he is making a framework and is covering that frame with good, healthy muscles. Food supplies the body with what it needs for growth and for energy. There are certain elements which are required to support life; many of them in very small quantities are found in the body, but if these are lacking the health begins to break. These elements are carbon, oxygen, nitrogen, sulphur, phosphorus, iron, calcium, potassium, sodium and several others in small amounts. The foodstuffs which furnish these elements are:

Examples of the different classes of foods:

Proteins—which yield carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, sulphur and sometimes iron and phosphorus.

Fats—fat of meat, butter, cream, vegetable oils, nuts and yolk of eggs.

Carbohydrates—rice and other cereals, potatoes, other starchy vegetables, fruits, honey and sugar.

Mineral matter—fruits, green vegetables, meat, milk, whole wheat and other grains, egg yolk, water.

Fats—which yield carbon, hydrogen and oxygen—these are the heat-producing foods. In winter we need more of such food to keep up the body heat.

Carbohydrates—which yield carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, whose molecules are in different arrangement than in fats. These yield energy in the most economical form.

If you expect any miracles in 1920 you have got to perform them.—"Sid Says."

MEALS FOR A DAY.

By serving occasional oven dinners the cook can economize on fuel and attend to work in other parts of the home.

Baked Soup.—Use a large earthen bean pot. Cut up in small pieces two pounds of beef, cover with cold water, season with salt and pepper and place in the oven. Cook two hours, then add two cupfuls of shredded cabbage, four large potatoes sliced, two onions sliced, one bunch of celery cut fine. Add hot water and seasonings and cook another hour, strain and serve hot. The beef and vegetables may be ground for hash and the soup is especially good.

Pimiento Bisque.—Take three pints of chicken stock, one-half cupful of cooked rice, six canned red peppers put through a ricer, two teaspoonfuls of salt, half a teaspoonful of tabasco sauce and one-half cupful of cream.

Fillet of Veal.—Divide a loin of veal steak into as many portions as will be needed; pound and season with salt, pepper and a bit of powdered sage. Roll each and fasten securely with wooden toothpicks. Roll each fillet in crumbs, then in egg and crumbs again, salt and repeat the egg and crumbing. Run a sharp wire skewer through the fillets and suspend them over a pan in the oven, basting often with chicken fat or butter. They will have a delicious flavor when cooked. Garnish with parsley.

Tomato Salad.—An extremely pretty salad is the following: Peel and cut tomatoes into eights without separating the sections; place on a leaf of lettuce and fill the centers with pearl onions. Serve with French dressing to which has been added chopped green peppers.

Spanish Chops.—Gash French chops to the bone and fill with the following stuffing: Six tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, three tablespoonfuls of minced boiled ham, two tablespoonfuls of mushrooms and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Roll in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat until well browned.

A few spoonfuls of chopped meat especially those of high flavor like ham will season a dish of rice or macaroni, mashed potato or hominy for a family of four or five.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and primary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

Quite a Shock.
Bridegroom (expectantly)—Now my dear father-in-law, I wish to say just a word about my debts—
Father-in-law (slapping him on the back)—Debts, my boy? Why, I'll warrant my debts exceed yours three to one.

Says Dodd's Kidney Pills Wonderful Remedy

Mrs. Della Olson, of New London, Wis., like many others, knows after experiencing the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills that they are unexcelled. Here is what Mrs. Olson recently wrote us:

"I suffered with rheumatism for years. There was a gravel deposit in the urine and I had frequent headaches. I had dark circles around my eyes and was always tired. I bought a box of your Dodd's Kidney Pills and am glad I did, for I secured quick relief and think they are a wonderful remedy."

Mighty few people realize in time that kidney trouble is making its advances upon their health. They put off treatment—they say, "Oh, I'll be all right in a day or two." And the malady tightens its grip. Result: Bright's Disease, hospital treatment, doctors' bills—often death.

When you have backache, dizziness, pain in loins, stiffness in stooping or lifting, spots before the eyes, sediment in secretions, rheumatic pains, or swollen joints, immediately start toning the kidneys by the regular use of the remedy endorsed by hundreds of users—DODD'S kidney Pills.

If your druggist does not carry these, order direct, sending us 60c in stamps and mention your druggist's name.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction

World War?

ISSUE BEFORE ALL NATIONS

Four Years of Hell Have Left the People in a Nightmare, From Which Only New Morale Can Arouse Them.

Article I.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Four years of pagan hell left Europe stunned and staggering. The world has come through the reddest and blackest night in all the history of the planet. With the signing of the armistice the people tried to shake off the nightmare and grope back to light. Today, a year after, it is trudging and stumbling, paralyzed and benumbed. The present problem of making the world safe for civilization is more serious than was the question of making it safe for democracy four years ago. If there was reason for sacrifice then, there is reason for it now. If there was cause for a military morale then, there is need of an industrial morale today. Freedom called men to fight and die that autocracy might not rule and ruin the world. The issue now is not only freedom, it is life—the chance to eat—to be warm—to sleep, and a tired, wounded, worn and weary people face the tomorrows with little faith and much fear.

I went to Europe to see for myself. I was unattached, a free agent. I was not a member of a Mission—I had no preconceived opinions. I sought facts—the human facts. I looked into the eyes of the people, walked the streets, talked with men, women and children, rich and poor, humble and powerful, journalists, bankers, lawyers, preachers, actors, government officials, coal miners, teamsters, factory hands, labor leaders, radicals, conservatives, children of the street and women at their washtubs, farmers and peasants, tenants and landlords. I cross-examined official records and pursued official figures. I listened to opinions, heard speeches, interviewed the streets, listened to the conversations of the cafes and the talk of the cheap restaurants. I knew that few Americans would have the chance to go to Europe to see and hear for themselves, that the millions of America would be compelled to depend upon the eyes and ears of others for information concerning a problem of world importance, a problem that is bound to involve us—we are part of it. No country is independent. Nations are interdependent to the extent and for the same reasons individuals are.

Only Hope Is in America.

Europe looks to America for salvation, as a dying man looks to God for mercy. We are her only hope. If the United States adopts the policy of leaving Europe alone, on the theory that we have done enough for her, Europe will be plunged into the savagery of revolution. It is faith in America, belief that America will sustain her, help her carry the awful load that is bending and almost breaking the back of weak and crippled Europe, that is keeping her from succumbing. This faith is about the only thing Europe has left.

What is America? It isn't the buildings and banks, the railroads, the houses and the land, it is the one hundred and ten million people of whom you are one. So Europe's plea is addressed to you. The prayers of her hungry children are petitions to you. America's policy—the answer of the United States, will come from the judgment of the people. No man or woman can escape the responsibility. Each of us will contribute to the decision. It isn't a hypothetical case we are called upon to decide—it is a question involving the life of human beings, men, women and children who are blood of our blood, part of the great world family—the human race. Shall we close down our shops, factories, mills and mines, bolt the doors, stop production at a time millions of human beings are crying to us for help? Can we listen to the thin, bony hands of children knocking at our doors and sit in our comfortable homes, leaving them to die on our threshold? No call to arms ever had so much right back of it, so much humanity as the call to work has today.

The house of Europe has been on fire. It has been wrecked. It is scarred and charred—a ruin. The cupboards are empty, the people demoralized and sick. Winter is attacking them. Hunger has a strangle hold. They are in rags. They must rebuild, and they haven't the material for the work. They turn to us. Their condition is their plea, our condition, our obligation. If the golden rule ever had any claim on our hearts and heads the time to prove it is now.

Our Comparative Plenty.

In our house things are well. We have been saved the devastation of war. Our acres are ample, our yield has been plentiful. We have an abundance of material. Our man power has only been lightly touched by the war. It is true that we gave nearly seventy thousand lives that the Prussians might not pass; that autocracy might not shackle the world. It was our best blood. Europe gave for four years, and she gave of her youth until her man power was almost exhausted.

We cannot sacrifice Europe without being sacrificed. If Europe falls—America will totter. The storm of unrest that rocks Europe to ruin will shake America. We must work and give—loan, if you please.

The heart of labor is warm. Its sympathy is born of suffering. The gospel of the brotherhood of man is the message that labor has always taught. I am sure that if I could picture the poverty of the children and women and men of Europe—if I could only make people see what I have seen in Europe, our differences would seem trivial by comparison with their sufferings. Men would will to work and find joy in the working. What greater compensation can come to conscience than working to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to comfort the lowly?

If the heart of capital is stone and cannot feel the message which comes over the seas, let labor show that its heart is humane and that it will suffer injustice, if need be, a little longer to save flesh and blood, brother and sister workers, on the other side of the ocean. It's a crime against God and man to stop production at this moment—and extravagance in this hour is a greater immorality than prostitution.

I did not stop with the gathering of figures, because I knew that while figures are important they frequently fail to tell the full truth. Official reports and statistics, granting that they are accurate, are at best only photographic. The photograph records with mathematical exactness the exterior of things. It seldom gets to the heart. The photograph is the still picture—the picture of the motionless fact. Impressions are more like oil paintings. They possess the human touch. They reach the heart within. Back of the dabs of paint on the canvas are the throbs of a heart. The film is only sensitized. Man's brain is sensitive. The photograph reproduces the outline; the painting, the substance.

Plain Record of Facts.

In reporting to you the things I saw and heard, I want to give you photographs—the figures and facts as I learned them, and the impressions I gathered from the speech and life of Europe. I have tried to keep my eyes free from prejudice so that the lenses would be unbiased.

In the June of 1914 Europe had a place in the sunlight of peace. The fields were filled with peasants, bending their backs to toil. Villagers were happy in the common routine of their simple lives. Factories, mills, mines and shops were filled with men. Wheels hummed, smoke streamed from chimneys, industry was singing. In the cities traffic roared, trains rattled. It was the story of a busy, working world.

Problems there were, of course, the problems normal to the growth and progress of the world. There was some unrest, too, but children scampered to school, patient women sang crooning songs to their babies. Men carrying dinner buckets whistled on their way to work. There were shadows—the unlighted side of the world's street—the slums and the tenements; but men and women were planning and fighting the black ugliness, and everyone had faith in the tomorrow. The world was making headway—it was growing better; its conscience was awakened. We were becoming our brother's keeper. It was a normal, sane, good old world. It was good to be alive.

Then came the day, the day that will never be forgotten—the day that changed the world; the day of four years, at the end of which civilization was almost hunched back.

Replant Your Lost Teeth.

When one's front teeth are knocked out there is no need to leave them on the floor, for they can be reinserted by a good dentist.

Dr. H. M. Savery tells in the Lancet (London), of two cases, in each of which several teeth were dislocated from their sockets. In one case the teeth were placed in salt water while the dentist carefully washed out the sockets. Then they were reinserted, a stitch or two taken in the gums and the jaws were bandaged shut so that the teeth bit on a pad of lint. In the other case the teeth still hung to the gums, so the sockets were cleaned out without detaching the teeth. In both cases the teeth became solidly fixed and the patients could use them for normal biting in a few months after the accident.

Dr. De Witt C. Henry of New York replaced not long ago the teeth of a truck driver that had been knocked out in a collision. The man had picked his teeth from the gutter and ran up to the dentist's office carrying them in his hand.

Our Arts.

Our arts are happy hits. We are like the musician on the lake, whose melody is sweeter than he knows, or like the traveler, surprised by a mountain echo, whose trivial word returns to him in romantic thunders.—Emerson.

POULTRY FACTS

GOOSE MEAT IS NUTRITIOUS

Fowls Will Be Found Profitable in Regions of Cheap Land and Abundant Pasturage.

If the goose of the fable was able to lay a golden egg there is no reason why her progeny of the present era cannot repeat this miracle in a more concrete form. Goose meat is nutritious and palatable and not greasy when properly cooked, and an extension of goose raising in the regions of cheap land where pasturage is abundant is a suggested source of cheaper meat.

Geese are raised chiefly in the South and middle West, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri and Arkansas being the chief supply sources. During the decade ending in 1910 the total number of geese declined 22 per cent. largely because of the lack of cheap pasture and the limited demand for goose feathers and goose flesh.

The Toulouse, Emden, Chinese and African are the most popular American breeds of geese, the first two greatly leading the others. Occasionally the eggs are used for cooking, but generally geese are kept only for meat and feather production. Practically all the geese in this country are raised in small flocks on general farms, some men making a specialty of collecting large numbers of geese and fattening them for a few weeks before they are killed. As grass makes up the bulk of feed for geese, it is doubtful whether it pays to raise them unless good grass range is available during the summer. A pool of water for bathing and recreational purposes is also a desirable feature.

The market for geese is not so general as for chickens. This point should be considered in undertaking the raising of geese. The demand and the price paid for geese are usually good in sections where goose fattening is conducted on a large scale.

Geese are hardy birds and need shelter only in the worst weather. An empty shed or an old barn usually is satisfactory for this purpose. From 4 to 25 geese may be kept on an acre of land, although under most conditions ten is a fair average. Wherever possible the geese should have free range during the grass season. Southern plantation owners keep geese to kill the weeds in the cotton fields.

The eggs may be hatched by either hens or geese. Some breeders prefer to raise all the goslings under hens, as geese sometimes become difficult to manage when allowed to hatch and rear their young. The period of incubation of goose eggs varies from 28 to 30 days.

Goslings do not need food until they are twenty-four to thirty-six hours old, when they should be fed one of the mashers recommended for chickens or goslings, or a mash or dough of two-thirds shorts (middlings) and one-third cornmeal, which can be made of equal parts shorts and cornmeal, with 5 per cent of beef scrap added after the goslings are six weeks old. Bread and milk make an excellent feed for young goslings. Fine grit or sharp sand should also be available in cold weather.

Most geese breeders do not confine their geese for fattening, but feed them freely a few weeks on a fattening ration before they are to be marketed. The geese may be confined for two or three weeks and fattened, but some green feed or vegetables should be added to the ration.

FEED SUPPLIED TO POULTRY

Several Different Substances That Go to Make Eggs Must Be Available in Hen's Ration.

The kind of feed supplied the hen is fully as important as the quantity. The egg is made up of several different substances and unless these are available in the ration eggs cannot be produced.

DISCARD ALL INACTIVE HENS

Old Fowls Are Better Working Members Than Those That Are Physically Weak.

When weeding out flocks a good place to begin is with the hens that are not thrifty and active. Old hens often are better working members of the feathered family than those that are physically weak all the time.

CONDIMENTS OF MUCH VALUE

Spices Used in Flavoring Not Generally Given Credit for Their Good Qualities.

Some of the spices that are often employed in flavoring preserves, both of fruits and meats, have a value that is more important than the mere tickling of the palate. An investigation recently made in France shows that vinegar is not only an excellent preservative but a powerful means of killing bacteria.

Ginger, black, white and red pepper have little bactericidal effect, but the action of mustard is most marked. However, the best of all are cloves and cinnamon, which act through their essential oils (called eugenol and cinnamaldehyde).

La Nature remarks that these researches are highly important, for they show that, even in the small quantities in which they are used these spices may be employed in preserving far better than chemical antiseptics, such as boric and salicylic acids, which are often added, though the French law prohibits their use.

"I didn't enjoy one day of good health for more than two years," says Mrs. C. E. Wildes, 746 E. Georgia St., Memphis, Tenn.

"At first I had nothing more than backache. Afterwards terrible attacks of pain left me weak and limp. My arms and limbs ached. My feet felt weighted with tons of lead. I couldn't walk without a cane and had to be carried to bed every night. I couldn't do a bit of work and kept my people busy rubbing my aching limbs. Sometimes my whole body became rigid. My feet were swollen twice their normal size."

"It almost killed me to pass the kidney secretions. I lost 42 pounds and each day felt I had aged a year. I was so nervous the rustle of a paper made me scream."

"Finally I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills and seven boxes made me a well woman. I have enjoyed the best of health for seven years, and have done all my housework without any trouble." Sworn to before me.

WOMEN EXERT QUEER POWER

Sisters Dwelling on Mysterious Mount in Burma Undoubtedly Able to Charm Reptiles.

In the fastnesses of Mount Popa, a mysterious sacred mount in Burma, live two sisters who have achieved a wide reputation for their uncanny powers in charming deadly snakes. Ma Hpwya and her sister are the only living exponents of an art which has been handed down from generation to generation within the circle of their family. Their secret is most rigidly preserved, and at their death will be passed on to their next-of-kin, as it was handed on to them by their parents.

In a great number of cases so-called snake-charmers swindle the public by extracting the poison fangs of their pets, thereby rendering themselves safe from accident. There is tragic proof, however, to the genuine nature of the performance of Ma Hpwya and her family, in the death of a sister who disregarded the strict traditions of the art.

King cobras are the snakes these remarkable women use. During the performance of charming the snakes an ordinary Burmese band is used, while the charmers squat on their haunches in front of the snake. They then begin to sway in rhythm to the music, giving sharp leaps each time the reptile strikes.

About Diamonds.

Only about 50 per cent of rough diamonds are cut into gems and lose about 60 per cent of their weight in being cut and polished. Diamonds are practically indestructible and the first diamond ever mined may possibly still be in existence. These reductions and losses leave the total of cut and polished diamonds at 46,357,474 carats.

An unusual photograph showing the Princess Helena Victoria attending the investiture at the Y. M. C. A. Jewish hut at Mile End road, London, and presenting one of the "Y" workers with the "Order of the Red Triangle." Gilbert Stuart.

It was the fashion of his time to try to paint great pictures. From this the same age as their cousin Richard, he had the hardihood to separate himself, reaching with a true originality of feeling after what really interested him, the big essentials in the subjects that he studied. Thus he put himself in line with the great painters, shaking himself free from the fads and nostrums of his time, and betaking himself straight to nature. In the story of American art he holds a unique and dignified position.—Charles F. Caffin.

No Written Music in Siam.

In Siam music is never written, but learned by ear and handed down from generation to generation.

Providing Against Trouble.

The twins, Fred and Joseph, were the same age as their cousin Richard, at whose home they were to spend the holidays. A few weeks before Christmas Richard wrote a long letter to Santa Claus, then added this postscript: "You had better bring three of everything, or I will have to fight the two of 'em at once."

Why Horse Chestnut?

It is said that the name horse chestnut was derived from the fact that when the leaves of the tree fall there is a scar left on the twig in the shape of a horseshoe, that bears marks resembling the nails of a shoe.

Goat's Milk.

Goat's milk in Naples is a satisfactory and healthful solution to the difficult problem of supplying the extremely poor with a food commodity free from deliberate adulteration. With a death rate of infants under one year of 155 per 1,000, the Naples rate is lower than that of the principal cities of Europe.
